Political Announcements

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

To the Democrats of Marion County: If you think my efforts on behalf of Democracy and W. J. Bryan in the campaign of 1906 and 1908 entitle me to the nomination for Representative to the Seventy-seventh general assembly of the State of Ohio, I will certainly appreciate any effort on your part for my support given.

M. B. CHASE.

FOR JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

The friends of David Vestal wish to announce his name for the nomination of Justice of the Peace, subject to the decision of the Democratic voters of Marion township, Saturday, August 10.

MANY VOTERS.

Democratic Mass Convention.

The Democratic voters of Marion township, Marion county, Ohio, are hereby notified that the Democrats of said township will hold a mass convention on Saturday, August 10th, 1907, between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock P. M. at the office of the Judiciary Directors in the Court House in said county for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following offices to be voted upon at the election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1907.

Two Township Trustees.
One Township Clerk.
One Township Treasurer.
One Constable.

Two Justices of the Peace, and to pass upon any and such other business as may come before said convention.

Dated August 3, 1907.
FRANK CAMPBELL,
Township Committeeman.

Dayton republicans in the recent primary voted for a dead man. No wonder Foraker won a victory.

Time Japs are now fighting the Mexicans. When they get through with that job they may decide to cease operations on the Western continent.

At last the Jamestown exposition has been completed. A little of the "no work, no eat" policy might have gotten things into shape sooner.

The novel advertising scheme adopted by a local business firm has given some citizens the impression that scarlet fever is prevalent in Marion.

Commander Peary has been forced to postpone his trip into the Arctic regions and we will be compelled to get along without the north pole for a while yet.

Political Talk

Former Governor Myron T. Herrick places the whole responsibility for his defeat for a second term on the Akron speech of Secretary Taft. In a letter to the New York Sun elsewhere reproduced. In a postscript, Col. Herrick says: "I would not have you infer from this letter that I am opposed to sending a delegation to the next national convention from Ohio for Taft. On the contrary, I am using and shall continue to use all my influence for the selection of a Taft delegation."

Is a question whether Col. Herrick has not already made his contribution to the result and on the anti-Taft side. His influence with his party in Ohio was greatly lessened by his defeat. This is the rule of politics, just as unjust though it may be. The opposition to Secretary Taft especially in the east, where party regularity is more successfully insisted upon by the politicians, has tried to make great use of Secretary Taft's Akron speech against him. Col. Herrick's letter has contributed to this effort, unwittingly, one must suppose, since the former governor is for Taft.

There will be some disagreement in Ohio with Col. Herrick's analysis of the situation preceding the famous Akron speech, and the influence it had on the result. At that time, he says, "the opposition was clearly losing ground and its organization was becoming demoralized." This discovery is original with Col. Herrick. The opposition was not then aware of lost ground or demoralization. On the contrary the view of the campaign from the opposition's side presented a picture of continued and steady development. There is no doubt that Secretary Taft contributed to the final result, but it can hardly be said that his speech revived a lost cause. It is a debatable question whether the result would not have been the same had he never made his speech. The campaign managers of Gov. Herrick let him make it with a full knowledge of its text and tenor.

By Secretary Taft, so Col. Herrick says, "Cox was made an issue in the campaign." This, too, is news. There is plenty of evidence that the people of the state regarded Cox as an issue in the campaign from the day it was demonstrated that a word was sufficient to determine the choice of candidates by the Republican state convention. The people of Ohio have never been patient with such a state of affairs as this exposed.

But, after all, the split milk of that election is not so important as the question of how much Col. Herrick has unwittingly assisted the opposition to Secretary Taft. He has shown a fair, sportsmanlike spirit, but his defeat hardly seems to have improved his political judgment.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

What Others Say.

AMERICA'S SIZE.
America's bigness has been done to death, in the opinion of more Americans than foreigners, even. It is often said and more often felt that this country runs too much to size, thinks too much of mere vastness. There's a wide and deep suspicion that it would be better if Americans rated quality more important and quantity less.

Yet big as we are in the United States and much as that immensity is decried at home and abroad, as a national pitfall, it seems that we are not big enough. That is true in many ways. It is evident that the country needs larger equipment, more men, greater wealth. The things which run most impressively into big figures do not go far enough.

There is a general complaint that men are lacking, men to dig and reap and do the plain work of the country. Fast as they come up from boyhood and over Europe they do not arrive in sufficient numbers. There is need of more skilled hands and good, strong arms. Also of more leaders with the right quality of brain power and the personal force which opens the way to industrial and commercial victory. The railways, it is admitted, are not equal to the demands of traffic. They need more tracks and cars. They haven't men enough trained to the tasks which increased business creates. They lack equipment sufficient to move the freight offering and in prospect. Now it is feared that the Northwest will suffer from a severe, perhaps terrible, fuel famine next winter because the railroads and the lake vessels will not be able to take coal enough to the head of Lake Superior and thence to interior distributing points.

It is much the same in respect to financial conditions. The stock of money is vast beyond all precedents. There is nothing like it in any other country. Yet the money market is tight, and in some cities decidedly tight. Great as the resources of the banks are, in the United States, they could easily use still larger capital.

All through the business interests of the country there is the same lack of facilities for doing the work to be done and doing it well, without the undue haste or overtaxing men and machinery. It is the most impressive demonstration ever witnessed of American success.—Cleveland Leader.

Among Magazines

THERE ISN'T ANY SPORT IN DEEP SEA FISHING.

You let down a heavy lump of lead and two big hooks baited with clams into thirty, forty or sixty feet of water. Then you wait until something nudges the line, or until you suspect that the hooks are bare. Then you give the line a quick jerk, and pull in, hand over hand, with more or less resistance and see what you have drawn from the grab-bag. It may be a silly, but nutritious cod, gaping in surprise at this curious termination of his involuntary rise in the world; or a silvery haddock, staring at you with round, reproachful eyes; or a pollock, handsome but worthless; or a shifty, writhing dog-fish, whose villainy is written in every line of his degenerate, chinless face. If may be that spiny gargoyle of the sea, a sculpin; or a soft and stupid hake from the mud-flats. It may be any one of the grotesque products of Neptune's vegetable garden, a sea-cucumber, a sea-carrrot, or a sea-cabbage. Or it may be nothing at all. When you have made your grab, and deposited the result, if it be edible, in the barrel which stands in the middle of the boat you try another grab, and that's the whole story.

It is astonishing how much amusement apparently, some men can get out of such a simple game as this. The interest lies, first, in the united effort to fill the barrel, and second, in the rivalry among the fishermen as to which of them shall take in the largest cod or the greatest number of haddock, these being regarded as prize packages. The sea-cucumber and the sea-carrrot, which expose the recipient to ridicule and assessments; the man who gets one of them gets less than nothing, for they count against the catcher. It is quite as much a game of chance as politics or poker. You do not know on which side of the boat the good fish are hidden. You cannot tell the difference between the nibble of a cod and the bite of a dog-fish. You have no idea what is coming to you, until you have hauled in "almost all of your line and caught sight of your allotted wriggling and whirling in the blue water. Sometimes you get twins.—From "Some Remarks on Gulls," by Henry van Dyke in the Fiction number August Scribner.

PRIDE IS TO BLAME

Central American States Want Peace but are too Proud to Make Move.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Most of the representatives of the Central American republics called upon Acting Secretary of State Bacon yesterday to talk individually with him about the project for a general convention of delegates from their countries in Washington to endeavor to reach an agreement likely to result in permanent peace in that quarter of the world. With all parties willing to enter upon such a conference, the difficulty appears to lie in the unwillingness of any one to take the initiative on account of personal pride. Each of the little republics thinks that it has a grievance against its neighbor and in the absence of an apology, would have the other party make the first advance.

The state department here, supported by the Mexican government is extremely desirous of furthering this conference, but it is estopped from itself formally proposing a meeting by a fear that its motives might be misunderstood and it is suspected of unwarrantable intervention. All of the ministers are in constant communication with their home government upon this subject, and there is reasonable ground for hope that within a very short time an agreement can be reached for the convention of the delegates in Washington, as the outcome of the projected conference. It shall clothe America and Mexico with the positive duty of intervening in the interests of peace.

BLAMES OIL KING

Professor Says Rockefeller's Methods Brought About Socialism.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 9.—John D. Rockefeller, founder and supporter of the University of Chicago, was bitterly attacked yesterday in an address by Prof. Charles Zuehlke, of the department of sociology, and by Professor Bushnell of Washington, who declared that the whole world is turning to socialism in an effort to escape the burdens that have been piled upon it by the class to which Rockefeller belongs.

Professor Zuehlke not only expressed emphatic opinions about the head of the oil combine, but he also criticized the Standard Oil company itself. He declared the defense made for the big corporation in the recent case, in which it was fined $29,240,000, that it had only committed an offense that is common in business, was weak and cowardly.

Professor Zuehlke assailed orthodoxy, not only in religion, but in economics, politics and social life, declaring it to be the cause of many of the present day evils. He said:

FIND SKELETON WHERE ADAMS INDICATED

Remains Supposed to be Those of W. J. Barney, Who was Murdered Six Years Ago are Unearthed Near Telluride, Colorado—Steve Adams Pointed Out the Spot.

Telluride, Col., Aug. 9.—What is said to be the skeleton of W. J. Barney, the timberman, employed in the Smuggler-Union mine, who mysteriously disappeared in June 1901, was exhumed near the Alta mill, near Gild King basin, 12 miles from town, by General Bulkely Wells, the manager of the mining company, and others. The remains were found in an improvised grave and its location was pointed out by Steve Adams, now in jail in Idaho awaiting a second trial on the charge of murder, when he was here in June 1906, in the custody of Wells.

After Adams made the alleged confession, which he afterwards repudiated, and in which he is supposed to have acknowledged being the assassin of Arthur Collins, formerly general manager of the Smuggler-Union mine, and to be familiar with the places where the bodies of W. J. Barney and Wesley Smith, a shift boss of the Liberty Bell mine, were buried, he was brought here by General Wells to point out the graves of the missing men.

When Wells and Adams went up into the basin there was more snow on the ground than had been anticipated, and several years having elapsed since the body had been buried, Adams was unable to determine exactly where the graves were. He then showed General Wells the place, according to the best of his recollection.

A part of the skeleton, including the teeth, were brought to town by General Wells for identification. Barney incurred the ill will of the union here by working at the Smuggler-Union mine after the strike in April, 1901. It was this strike that caused the riots in July of that year. Adams is said to have told Wells that Barney's body was stripped of its clothing, which was buried some distance from his body. Afterward, the body was taken up and buried in another place. While here in 1906 Adams is said to have pointed out to Wells the tree, in the darkness of which he claimed to have stood when he fired the fatal charge of buckshot into the back of Manager Collins. He is also said to have told Wells where he threw the cartridges after removing them from the gun.

Dr. Lord, a dentist, after examining the teeth of the skeleton brought in by General Wells, identified them as belonging to Barney. He had performed certain dental work for Barney.

It is reported that warrants will be issued for two men who were prominent in the local union of the Western Federation of Miners when Barney disappeared.

LIMITED IS WRECKED

Lake Shore Flyer Crashes Into a Section of a Freight Train.

Chestertown, Ind., Aug. 9.—Two men, engineer Downey and Conductor Schultz, both of Elkhart, were seriously injured and a score of passengers received slight bruises and suffered from a shock early today, when the west bound twentieth century limited on the Lake Shore railroad crashed into the rear half of a fast freight which had been cut in two and was standing on the main track. The passenger engine and the rear end of the freight were demolished. Three of the coaches left the track, careened dangerously and then righted without turning over. The track was torn up and littered with wreckage and traffic will be delayed several hours.

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION IS COMPLETED AT LAST

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 9.—The Jamestown exposition is declared to be practically complete in a statement issued today by Director General James M. Barr who also asks for the project the support of the country at large.

"The Jamestown tercentennial exposition, barring minor details which will be finished within ten days, is completed," he says. "It fittingly commemorates the great historical event which it was designed to celebrate, and it reflects credit on the state of Virginia, the south and the nation. In the character of its buildings, the excellence of its exhibits and the beauty of location on historical Hampton Roads, it compares favorably with any exposition held in this country, and it fully justifies its management in asking the united support of the people of the country."

BORED AMPUTATION OF LEG AND MAY RECOVER

New York, Aug. 9.—Pinned beneath a locomotive, Charles Shindley, a brakeman on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, suffered the amputation of a leg before he could be extricated from under the engine, which had turned over on him in the yards at the Bronx yesterday.

The operation was performed by an ambulance surgeon without the use of stimulants, and Shindley gave a suggestion to the physicians during the operation. When the operation was completed and he was extricated from his position the brakeman was taken to a hospital, where it is said he may recover.

PEARY FORCED TO POSTPONE HIS TRIP

New York, Aug. 9.—There will be no Peary Arctic expedition this year. Plans for taking the Roosevelt north to her winter quarters at Cape Sheridan, north Greenland ready for a dash to the north pole next spring have been practically abandoned because of the impossibility of getting the ship ready in time to escape the danger of being nipped in the new ice.

The delay has been a serious blow to Commander Peary according to a friend, who also said that the explorer realized the impossibility of making the trip before next year. "Commander Peary has been hoping against hope for days," said Capt. Bob Bartlett, his sailing master of two years ago, "but he has been compelled to realize that it would be impossible for him to get into winter quarters this September as planned."
